

I would like the FCC to continue to support for number portability within the cell phone industry. I have been a customer of my current cell phone provider for a number of years, and I am generally happy with them. However, there are occasional service issues. It is my belief that number portability would empower users, and inasmuch, provide for improvement in services within the industry, or otherwise find that users can take advantage of an American right: competition.